

REGISTER NOW: <https://rebrand.ly/67tsc06>

LECTURE
In person

ETHICS OF INVESTIGATIVE RESEARCH

The Investigative is a theoretical paradigm for qualitative social research, different from the Cooperative. Its premises are that 1) the main aim of social research is not to illustrate the subject's point of view by putting oneself in the subject's shoes, but rather to understand and explain the social conflicts that are so widespread in contemporary societies; 2) people often lie and try to hide a good part of their lives from the social researcher, who has to use different methods in order to offer a more accurate and realistic description of reality.

9 JUNE
2025

2 – 4 PM
PARI OFFICES

PRESENTER

Marco Marzano is Professor of Sociology at the University of Bergamo (Italy). His research interests are: the Catholic Church, power theory, ethnography and qualitative research, research ethics. He is the author of numerous books and articles. His last book on priestly sexuality and affectivity, written in Italian, has been translated into five languages.

MODERATOR

Gaynor Paradza leads the Land Governance programme at PARI.